Slow Food Dallas presents "A Texas Harvest" dinner Saturday evening, October 16th, 2004 at 6:30pm at Central Market Plano, 320 Coit at George Bush, Plano, TX 75075, 469.241.8300, in the 2nd Floor cooking school classroom.

Members and guests: $10 and bring a side dish or wine to share. Non-members welcome: $15.

For reservations or information please email info@slowfooddallas.org.

Meet Slow Food Dallas members Ugo Ginatta and Robert Hutchins, the two local artisanal food producers Slow Food Dallas is sending to Terra Madre, Slow Food's October 2004 international conference.

Ugo Ginatta, who owns Dallas-based Paciugo and makes traditional Italian gelato, and Robert Hutchins, who uses organic and sustainable pasturing methods to raise cattle, chickens and goats at his Rehoboth Ranch in Greenville, will meet with nearly 5,000 other delegates from 120 nations working in sustainable agriculture.

The international Slow Food conference "Terra Madre: World Meeting of Food Communities" Oct. 20-23, 2004, is a forum for those who seek to grow, raise, catch, create, distribute and promote food in ways that respect the environment, defend human dignity, and protect the health of consumers.

The delegates represent "food communities," Terra Madre's term for those who are part of a chain of production, or who are linked by a common product, ethnic identity, region, history, or approach.

Each local Slow Food convivium was asked to send premier producers from its area. Over 450 American and 110 Canadian delegates will attend Terra Madre, including fruit growers, ranchers, honey producers, winemakers, vegetable farmers, artisanal cheesemakers, bread bakers, brewers, chefs and more.

Mr. Ginatta and Mr. Hutchins will be available for interviews and photos at this event.
